5-7, 8: The interesting point here is that junior officers today, UNLIKE previous generations, are seriously concerned about such subjects as health insurance, retirement, etc.

NOTE FOR THE RECORD

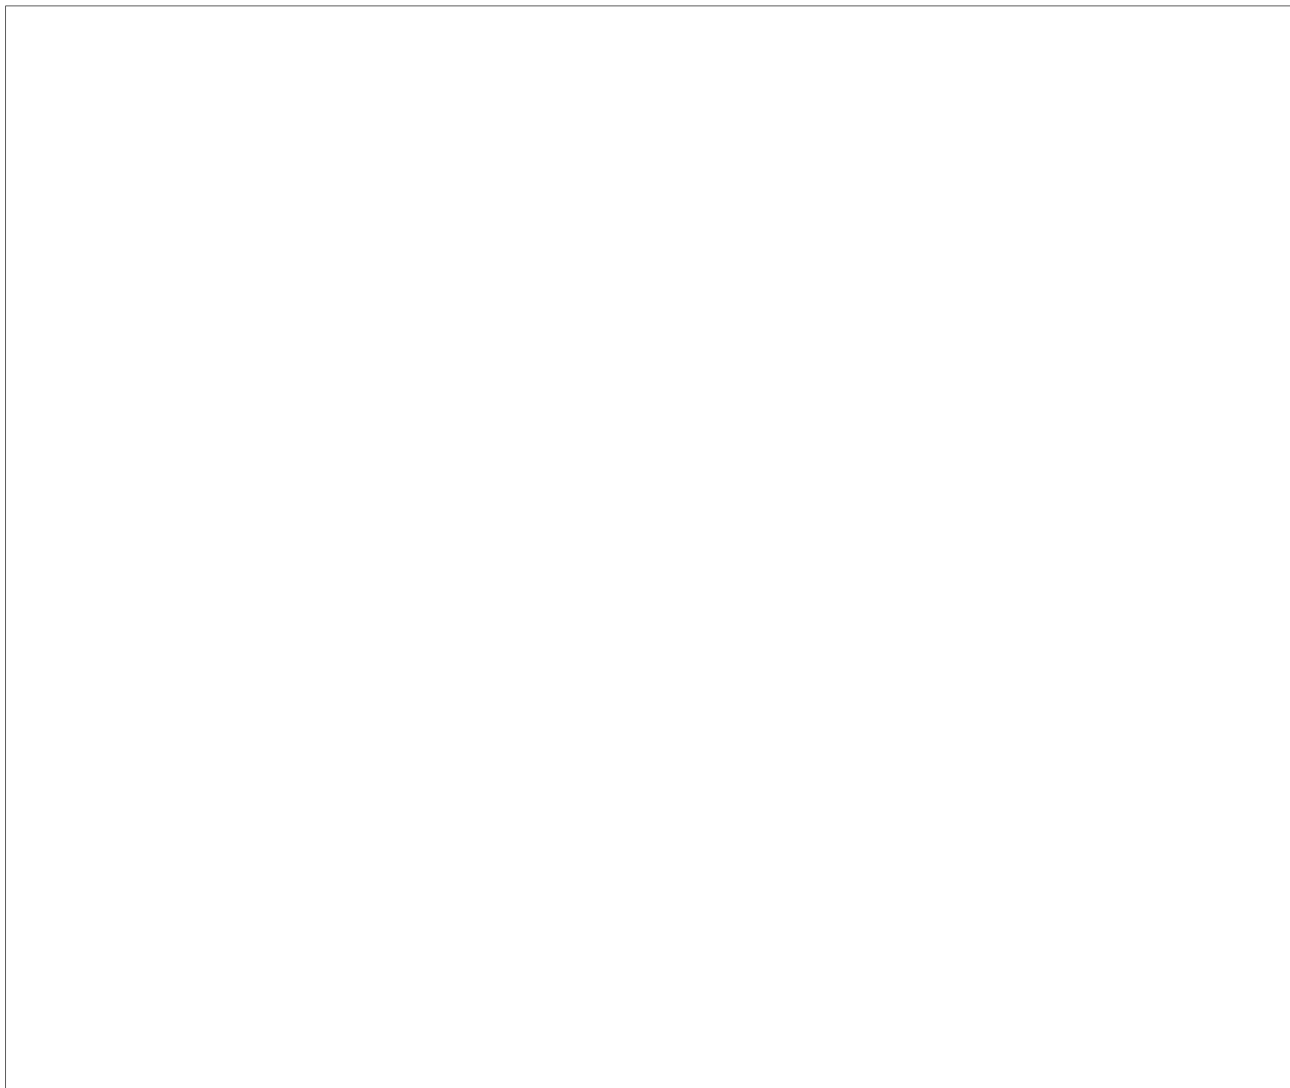

SUBJECT: Career Trainee Briefing

25X1

On 21 May [redacted] and I spent an interesting evening [redacted] with the current class of 53 career trainees. After nearly two hours of formal discussion we adjourned to the student recreation building for two more hours of one-on-one and small group discussions.

This class had a variety of administrative questions on health and life insurance, promotion, overtime pay, assignments, language training, etc. However, three major areas of concern were expressed by at least a quarter of the class as follows:

In general, this was an excellent opportunity to explain programs, policies and procedures and to dispell mis-conceptions. The three of us made sure that every question[^] got an answer or was put in touch with an expert. I share these observations with you as an FYI in the event it may help to identify a deficiency in one of our processes.
